Final Project Changes

After going through the process of making this website, I decided to change some components. The first major component that I decided to change was my call-to-action: signing up for my newsletter. After looking into it, I realized that it would not be beneficial to have a newsletter for my website while I am still in college and not fully in the professional world. I decided it would be more beneficial to have viewers download my resume, so I added that icon to the contact bar and the resume page.

In addition, I decided to add Pinterest to my contact bar, as well as get rid of the logo idea I originally had and created the cloud banner at the top. I also added some content to fill out the pages (such as adding artists that I am currently listening to on the music page).
